PART A – ESSENTIAL INFORMATION

1 SUMMARY

Leo Tolstoy’s personal library, which numbers 22,000 volumes in 40 languages, is one of the largest writer's libraries in the world. The library was founded by three generations of the Volkonskys-Tolstoys families: by Tolstoy’s grandfather Prince Nikolai Volkonsky, by his parents Maria and Nikolai Tolstoy, and of course the greater part of the library was collected by Tolstoy himself. When Tolstoy’s wife, Sophia Tolstaya, arrived at Yasnaya Polyana in 1862, after their marriage, she found only 2 bookcases there. Now, as it was in 1910, there are 25 bookcases and one big coffer. So, most of the books came to the library in the last 50 years of Tolstoy’s life. The oldest book in the library was published in 1613, the latest books – published in 1910, the last year of Tolstoy’s life. There are about 600 books of the XVII-early XIX centuries, most of them belonged to Tolstoy’s father, Count Nikolai Tolstoy. Tolstoy’s library is very rich in subjects. The choice of books Tolstoy was buying was defined by his activities as writer, thinker, and religious prophet. Among the books of Tolstoy’s library there are editions of books and magazines, which were used as sources for War and Peace, Khadzhi-Murat, for the unfinished novels from the epoch of Peter the Great and history of Decembrists, for his books of wisdom Circle of Reading, For Every Day, Path of Life. There are many editions of the Bible in different languages; many Bible volumes are with Leo Tolstoy’s marginal inscriptions. Books with Tolstoy’s marginalia, his penciled notes, are of special significance as they may be treated like Tolstoy’s manuscripts. Some books like Lao-Tzû. The Light of China... Philadelphia: Research publ. Co: Peter Reilly, 1903, or: Scheffler, Johann. Des Angelus Silesius Cherubinischer Wandersmann. Jena; Leipzig: Eugen Diederichs, 1905 - could demonstrate Tolstoy as a translator: he did his penciled translations just on the book pages. Among the books and periodicals there are many editions signed by famous contemporaries of Tolstoy. There are many books signed by A. M. Gorki, A. A. Fet, I. A. Bunin, L. N. Andreev, I. I. Mechnikov, V. S. Solov’ev, N. Ya. Groth, Bernard Shaw, Romain Rolland, John Galsworthy, Björnstjerne Björnson, William Stead and many others. Tolstoy used to receive books and periodicals from all over the world, sometimes with editions in his library which could not be found elsewhere. Tolstoy’s private doctor D. P. Makovitsky remarked that Tolstoy’s library had been collected by the whole world. The library could be divided into two equal parts. Books and periodicals in Russian and books and periodicals in foreign languages. Tolstoy was one of the greatest intellectuals of his time as demonstrated through the books of his library. All his life he was a dedicated reader and used to keep the contents of the books in his memory for a long time.

3.2 Description

Tolstoy’s personal library is a unique collection of books and periodicals. Tolstoy’s wife, daughters, friends understood precious value of all the items in the library. So in the 1880s Tolstoy’s wife and his daughter Tatiana began the process of describing the library using special cards. In 1908 Sophia Tolstaya began to work on catalogue of the library and bought special library books for the books in Russia, French, English and German. Unfortunately the work was not completed but the catalogue books have been preserved in the Tolstoy House. Then in 1912-1916, a secretary of Leo Tolstoy Valentin Bulgakov under the guidance of Professor A. Gruzinsky began working on the catalogue. He prepared 5 manuscript catalogue books of the library description. When Aleksandra Tolstoy, Leo Tolstoy’s daughter, was a director of Yasnaya Polyana, she resumed the catalogue work and invited specialists from the Historical Museum in Moscow. Under Professor Yefimov the card catalogue was completed in 1927-1928. Then, after emigration, Bulgakov returned to Yasnaya Polyana in 1952, and under his supervision academic bibliographical work was resumed.

In 1950-1960s, the Russian part of the library was completed and the first volume (in 2 books) was published: Biblioteka L. N. Tolstogo v Yasnoi Polyane: Bibliographicheskoe Opisanie: Knigi na russkom yazyke. Moskva: Kniga, 1972 (In two parts). Then in the 1970s the second volume of the Russian part of the library was prepared: Biblioteka L. N. Tolstogo v Yasnoi Polyane: Bibliographicheskoe Opisanie: Periodicheskie opisaniia na russkom yazyke. Moskva: Kniga, 1978.

Currently the work on Volume 4 “Periodicals in Foreign Languages” and on Volume 5 “Music, Manuscripts” has been continued. Editing process is taking place.
