CAN TWEETS RECRUIT FOR TERROR?
Understanding radicalization in the social media sphere

RESPONSES TO RADICALIZATION

The Internet is not the cause of radicalization and violence but it is sometimes used to spread them. Such practices need to be understood to tackle the problem.

State and Internet companies block or remove content, although overreach and censorship are huge risks.

Civil society groups and religious entities push back with counter-speech.

Conflict sensitive journalism avoids demonization and dehumanization.

Media and information literacy and intercultural dialogue empowers users against extremism.
