Meeting report

Participants were welcomed by Ms Miriam Nisbet, DIR/INF and Ms Joie Springer. Ms Springer then presented an overview of the Memory of the World Programme and its achievements since the last MSC meeting in 2006. She noted that since its creation in 1995, the MSC has only met twice before this. At the start of the second meeting, members had observed that little had been achieved in the nine intervening years; the same is true for the intervening period since the last meeting in 2006. In describing the proposals that had been thought feasible for implementation during the two years after the meeting, but had proven too difficult to realize, she asked a certain number of questions to guide members deliberations.

The floor was then opened for discussion. Mr Fathi Saleh compared MoW with the World Heritage (WH) programme noting that Abou Simbel helped put UNESCO in spotlight. After 17 years of WH was active and energetic unlike MoW. In his view, MoW is underfunded and understaffed, and as a result, there had been no follow-up of the recommendations of previous MSC meetings. Fund-raising requires staff and consultants to implement projects and raise the profile of the Programme.

This led to a discussion about what action was needed over the next few years that was realistic and achievable. Any activities that were proposed should include the work of the national and regional committees as well as the need to identify audiences and target them. This concerned the general public, decision-makers, media, information professionals, youth, etc. Mr Jonah Goldstein proposed that communication mechanism should be sent to regional bodies so that they know who to reach out to.

Me Bel Capul suggested to tailor fit activities to objectives and that an administrative structure should be identified.

Mr Saleh agreed that regional committees and the products they have developed were important but national committees need to be more proactive. The commemoration of an inscription on the Register generates media presence and publicity, but is short-term hype only.

Obstacles to the Programme were identified as the lack of seed money, resources, information as well as the need for feedback from UNESCO.

Mr Lothar Jordan proposed that a realistic list of small but achievable activities should be drawn up, clearly identifying roles in order to establish a lucid plan. Suggestions included the preparation of a kit for committees; a mechanism to communicate with others (such as a wiki) and to share ideas, etc., precise structure for committees to build awareness that they were part of a larger network and with better guidelines on what was expected of them.

Other ideas concerned the production of a television on the programme; a powerpoint type presentation on MoW for publicity; cooperation between institutions on register. It was felt that the preparation of kits needed to be consistent but flexible to each region/nation and that opinions of each audience on needs should be solicited. The need for extra staffing and funds should be argued and proven.

Mr Goldstein proposed that MSC develop a strategy for fundraising; UNESCO will provide tools but MSC members must undertake the basic work. MSC agreed that it would assume responsible for creating the plan for implementation by secretariat. It was argued that the plan should not be for money in a vacuum but should describe the specific activities that needed to be financed.

It was felt that different types of marketing plans were essential along with international patrons and sponsors to promote visibility. In this regard, the MSC could help to identify “ambassadors” for programme and provide name of possible personalities who could be contacted in this regard.

BRAINSTORMING SESSIONS

Two brainstorming sessions were organized. Firstly with MSC members whose contributions were later conveyed to representatives of the private sector that had been specially invited to provide their comments on the Programme.

The full list of proposals and suggestions for future activities is described in Appendix 3.
